Buyer's Initials

The Buyer agrees to keep this Bengal in a safe and healthy environment, provide proper nutrition, and treat it as a family pet with proper love and affection.

Buyer's Initials

The Bengal must be housed in quarters large enough and interesting enough to provide comfort, entertainment, and exercise.

Buyer's Initials

It is important that potential owners understand the activity level and type of personality your Bengals possess. If you are looking for a lap cat, your Bengal kitten/cat are certainly great lap warmers, but they also require a lot of exercise and interaction with their humans. Like all kittens, they are very curious and feel the need to explore everything in their environment. An older kitten or young adult could be considered if one is looking for a less active Bengal. Since they are out of the boisterous kitten stage, they can be great pets for someone who wants this breed of cat but would prefer not to go through the kitten stage.

Buyer's Initials

Upon introducing your Bengal to a new home, it is highly recommended to keep your kitten in a smaller, confined room (such as a small restroom) for the first few days. Crying is expected during this time and will decrease as the kitten feels more comfortable in its home.
